
TOMMY SESLER CRUSADE KICK-OFF RALLY HELD

Some 85 to 90 people attended the kick-off rally of the Central Virginia Tommy Sesler Crusade on Saturday night April 1, 1978 at the W.O.W. Building.

Those attending enjoyed a chicken box dinner at 6:00 p.m. After the dinner a program of special music, testimonies and a message from Evangelist Tommy Sesler challenged everyone attending to begin promoting the Crusade scheduled for May 7-13 at Bragg Stadium at 8:00 p.m. nightly.

Litter Clean-Up In County Last Year Cost $4,464

Over $1 million and 245,000 worker-hours were spent in collecting litter from Virginia's roadsides last year, the State Department of Highways and Transportation has announced.

The total clean-up costs for 1976-77 decreased slightly from the years before, with a total of $1,133,511 compared to $1,470,404 spent in 1975-76.

In Appomattox County, litter clean-up cost $4,464 last year. Clean-up on primary roads cost $3,979 while clean-up on secondary roads only cost $485 in our county.

The department's report came as its maintenance forces were gearing up for their annual spring cleanup during the weeks of April 10 through April 22. Those weeks have been designated "Keep Virginia Beautiful Weeks" by Governor John N. Dalton and are just prior to Historic Garden Week.

But this year's cleanup will be a little different from past years, according to C. O. Leigh, the department's state maintenance engineer.

"With the severe winter breakup in many areas of the state, our first priority in our special Garden Week maintenance program will have to be surface maintenance," Leigh said. "Those primary and secondary roads most likely to be used on the tours should receive a high priority in our surface patching and shoulder maintenance operation."

Virginia, as well as many other states, suffered considerable road damage and breakup during the winter freeze-thaw cycles. Some of the time and money normally spent on the litter cleanup operations will have to be spent on road repairs.

A rough winter also presents special cleanup problems, Leigh said. Sand and other abrasives used on the snow and ice accumulate along the roadways after they've done their job. Bridges, curbs and gutters, and road shoulders must be swept clean with brooms or mechanical sweepers.

Of course, litter itself presents a huge problem every year. It's not only costly and unsightly, but also can be a safety hazard. Windblown trash can distract drivers and obstruct their visibility, and on occasion has struck windshields of moving vehicles.

Cans and bottles can also be picked up by the blades of large mowers used in the spring and summer and be thrown toward traffic on the highways.

Leigh suggested travelers could help with the problems by:

*Keeping litter containers in their vehicles and using them for trash until it can be disposed of properly.

*Using the litter barrels placed at intervals along Virginia's highways. About 1,400 such receptacles are provided by the department for that purpose, with signs on the roadways pointing out their locations.

*Encouraging the establishment and use of adequate local refuse disposal facilities if they aren't already provided. This would help in eliminating household garbage being thrown in and around the state's roadside receptacles.

In addition to litter collection, which is a year-around job, spring cleaning includes the painting of trash barrels and the cleaning of signs, rest areas, waysides, and picnic table areas.

Approximately 5,000 department employees will be spending many thousands of hours in the statewide cleanup. But they need the cooperation of all Virginians, Leigh said.

1978 Va. Campground Map-Guide Available

The 1978 edition of the Virginia Campground Map-Guide has been released by the Virginia Travel Council. An annual publication, the Map-Guide lists the 98 major privately - owned campgrounds in Virginia. A second section details camping facilities in the National parks; State Parks; National Forests; Regional Parks and Local Parks.

Copies of the Map-Guide are being distributed in the Eastern United States and throughout the Commonwealth. Featured in the publication is a keyed map showing the location of each campground. A special blow-up section of Virginia's Tidewater Area, which has a heavy concentration of campgrounds is provided.

The Campground Map-Guide also gives comprehensive information about the facilities and the length of season of each property. Its unique design permits it to be used in folder racks or as a self-mailer.

Two useful items of the map are a detailed map listing the attractions in Virginia and data on the Toll Facilities in the state.

Copies may be obtained by sending 25 cents for postage and handling to the Virginia Travel Council, P. O. Box 8048, Richmond, Va. 23223.

Form Helps Protect Consumer From Odometer Fraud, DMV Says

RICHMOND - A new form designed to help protect consumers from odometer fraud is now available from all Division of Motor Vehicle offices, according to DMV Commissioner Vern L. Hill.

"For several years Federal law has provided that used car buyers must be given full, written odometer information on any used vehicle they purchase," Hill said. "This form, an odometer disclosure statement, will make it easier for both seller and buyer in Virginia to transfer this information and keep the proper records."

On the form the seller must indicate the vehicle's exact odometer reading at the time of sale, whether the odometer was replaced, set back, disconnected or repaired while in the seller's possession, and whether the reading reflects more than 99,999 miles.

After the form is completed, seller and buyer both sign it and the buyer keeps it as long as he owns the vehicle. When ownership is transferred again, a new odometer disclosure statement should be completed and given to the new owner. Hill stressed that while the law requires the odometer information to be given the new owner in writing, it does not have to be done on this form. It is merely a convenience for Virginia vehicle owners.

Hill said auto dealers are required to furnish the same odometer information as individuals, but are subject to more stringent record-keeping requirements.
